On Sunday, 9 September, the City Hall Atrium hosts the second annual Feel at Home in The Hague – International Community Fair, a wonderful occasion to take stock of all that The Hague has on offer for the international community living in this city.

Approximately 125 businesses, clubs, and groups will present information about their services and activities. They cover the public, private and volunteer sectors, including local Dutch groups reaching out to their expat neighbors. The variety is impressive, ranging from the chance to support the valiant fund-raising efforts of Rotary International, to professional networking opportunities provided by the Women's Business Initiative International, to creative and entertaining challenges for kids – to mention but a few.

The number of sponsors has grown, with Octagon and BMW (as Gold and Bronze Sponsors respectively) joining The Municipality of The Hague (Main Sponsor), Shell, the British School and ABN AMRO (Gold Sponsors).

Whilst parents are browsing the stalls, their children will be entertained in the storytelling corner where they can explore their creativity in a supervised and secure environment; young professionals are invited to a quieter corner to network or chat while enjoying a fashion show and a glass of wine.

The HaGuest Card Boulevard will introduce the companies offering benefits to expats, while the programming on the Podium will provide a taste of the performances, classes, and pursuits you can enjoy while living in The Hague.

Ticket sales are kicking off with discounted online sales. At the door, tickets will cost €6 per person or €12 for a family.

But ordering online will save you time and money – tickets cost €5 per person or €10 for a family when ordered via www.thehagueonline.com/fair. On the day you'll just walk right in and enjoy the biggest international community event in The Hague in 2007!
